Trimbos institute wants exam for shroom seller

6 june 2008

Oblige magic mushrooms diplomas, smartshops and drug researchers say.

Salesmen of magic mushrooms in Amsterdam are compulsory to do an exam that tests on knowledge of goods and social skills. Only with a shroom diploma selling is allowed. At least this is the plea of drug institution Trimbos and the National Smartshop Association (VLOS), that want to create the exam together. The shroom exam is one of the proposals of the VLOS to regulate the sales of hallucinogenic mushrooms. That regulation should prevent an upcoming shroom ban. The organization also thinks that Amsterdam should halve the number of places that sell magic mushrooms. Right now there are an estimated fifty shroom shops in the city. This approach should apply to Amsterdam because this is the only city with tripping tourists.
